The long continued closeness has resulted in less damage to business men than could reasonably have been expected. This is in no small degree owing to the fact, we think, that bankers have been disposed generally to pursue a generous policy toward their customers, and where assured that those whom they were accommodating really deserved aid to nurse them along until the staguant period could be bridged over. There is a common in terest between the lender and the borrower which makes it peculiarly desirable for both to act, in times like these, in the best faith. The situation would be different if credit was extended on a speculative basis, but this can hardly be said to be the case in any branch of regular business. It is true that many have encountered losses in speculative ventures within the last twelve or eighteen months; and that many who had no business in the New York stock gambling arena have seen their means take sudden flight within the last sixty days; but the present strain is a consequence of, or at least has other causes than these; such as an actual poverty in two or three of the leading staples of the country; the uncertainty attending Congressional legislation; the unprofitableness of our foreign commerce, and a wide-spread indisposition of men to pay their current small obligations. The shortness of the wheat, cotton and sugar crops were indeed calamities at a time when the commerce of the country was undergoing a transition from the condition in which it was placed by the war to

The bill passed by the House of Representatives on the 21st inst. provides that the Secretary may sell surplus gold discretionary, giving sixty days' public notice The vote on suspending the rules to consider it was 113 to 38. The bill was put through the House by an almost unanimous vote, hardly a dozen members answering when the negative vote was called. It will entirely break up the custom of selling gold secretly, as it requires that when the Department has any for sale, a notice of not tess than sixty days shall be given by advertisement in Washington and New York. Sealed proposals must be received by the Treasurer at New York, and the highest responsible bidder will get the gold. We have been favored with the following extracts of a letter from General Wm. Mahone, President of the Norfolk and Petersburg, and South Sides Rallroads dated January 15, 1867, to Major C. Wallace, Superintendent of the Western and Atlantic Railroad: "I want to arrange to grant bills lading in our place (Atlanta) for Liverpool direct, free of all changes except freight and insurance. Endlroads to collect of steamers, and the latter observation for insurance and advances on ship-ments. We can and must have direct trade for he South. The information embraced in the foregoing and one steamer had already gone forward from outolk, fully indened with culton, and that anher of the same line was, at the date of the titer of themral Mahone, being ladered with itton for the same destination, is gratifying intrade from the South with Liverpool, we hearthy congrestalate it, and trust that it may prove a meetes throughout, and for all time to come. We need not enter into any argument to prove, what has been demonstrated long ago and often in these columns, the advantages that must result to the South from direct trade with Europe. In dury past and gone, political influences backed by the money power—and we may as well speak the trath, though it may reflect upon the South—and the superior commercial enterprise of the North, defeated the spasmodic efforts of the South, whenever they were made, to establish such a trade. Southern capital found other inmuch a trade. Southern capital found other in restments than in shipping andrommercial pur-nuits: with negroes and load, it was not centent it yearly required some negroes and more land. and, comparatively speaking, it sought investment from the Potomac to the Rio Grande only in these. Combined with the fanatical bottlilly to the institution of slavery which made its appearance in the North facts years ago, this unwise neglect of the South of its every other great interest, and the readiness with which it yielded the comparation manufacturing and financial interest, and the readiness with which it yielded to the commercial, manufacturing and financial enterprise of the North gave to the latter every advantage for which it contended, and secured to it all the immense profits of direct trade with Europe. And now that Northern fanaticism has been gorged with its success; now that there is land a plenty and millions of acros to spare; shall the mosapods of direct trade still continue in the North? We shall see! The new era which has dawned upon the fourth, gives it opportunities to employ its capital more wisely than it did before. The Northik enterprise is one of these. Let others apring up! We feel, despite her misfortunes, that "there is life in the old land yet!" The second paragraph of the extract from timeral Mahome's letter to Major Walsecquoted in the foregoing, propose to innegurate a system in the foregoing, proposes to innugurate a sys which is well worth the serious considerational holders of cotton who ship it from this po I holders of cotton who ship it from this point id as such we invite their special attention to it. We trust that it will impress tham favorably, and that it will prove a propeller to that which the writer of the isster desires to secure, "direct trade for the South."
